Intrauterine Insemination Treatment (I.U.I)

What is Intrauterine Insemination Treatment (I.U.I)

I.U.I. stands for intrauterine insemination. This is a treatment whereby the partner's sperm is 'prepared' and introduced into the female partner's uterus (womb) during the fertile period.

Primarily I.U.I. is offered to women when using Donor Sperm in cases of severe male infertility, in single women and lesbian couples. It is also offered in cases of unexplained infertility, hostile cervical mucus or age related sub-fertility.

This treatment has been recommended in order to increase your chances of pregnancy.

1. This potential increase is achieved is by
The use of fertility hormone injections, so that more than one mature follicle develops on the ovaries (the follicle is the cyst that contains the egg) and also to improve egg quality.
2. Inseminating with the strongest and most motile sperm.
3. Injecting the sperm into the uterus (womb).
4. Triggering ovulation and inseminating the prepared sperm at the fertile time.

Our I.U.I. programme is performed on a natural cycle; that means there is no interference with the menstrual cycle. We recommend that you try the I.U.I. procedure for 3 attempts over 6 months.

About Mr Haddad

Nabil Haddad qualified in medicine in Cairo in 1976. He trained in London, Southampton, Liverpool and Edinburgh. In 1989, Nabil was appointed as a Consultant Gynaecologist in Chester. Here he developed the Fertility and Assisted Conception Service and has led the service ever since.

Nabil was instrumental in pioneering Transport IVF and had the first ever successful baby from that technique in 1990.

Nabil is committed to the provision of total fertility services and advocates a Fitness for Fertility approach in order to prepare couples for treatment and improve successful outcomes.

Nabil serves on many local and national fertility committees. His research is clinically orientated and he has published on many aspects of fertility care.

Nabil is an expert in Gynaecological Management of:

Endometriosis

Fibroids

Menopause

Menstrual disorders

Pelvic pain

Polycystic Ovarian Syndrome and abnormal cervical smears.

Recurrent Miscarriage

Nabil takes great pride in offering the highest standard of individualised 'Patient Care' in comfortable and professional surroundings and believes wholly in evidence-based medicine.

Furthermore, the decision making process does not only involve Mr Haddad and his multi-disciplinary team, but involves you the patient, which means you fully understand what treatment is being prescribed and for what reasons.
